Physician Who Also Was Called, Too Late, Says It Is Impossible to Prevent Patients Consulting "Scientists."

SPECIAL BY CABLE TO THE ST. LOUIS RE-PUBLIC AND THE NEW YORK HERALD. London, Oct. 1 .- (Copyright, 1904.) -- Some sensation has been caused by the statement that the death of Mr. Colin Hunter, F. R. A., which occurred a few days ago, took place under circumstances recalling in many respects the tragic death of Mr.

Mr. Hunter had been suffering from brain trouble and serious internal maladies. During that time he had been undergoing treatment at the hands of Christian Science healers.

A few months ago Doctor John H. Clarke, a homeopathic practitioner, was called in, and it was he who gave the certificate that death was due to cerebral

The Christian Science healer who was last in attendance on Mr. Hunter was Charles A. Wase, a young follower of Mrs. Eddy, who came to this country from India. Wase claims that before he was called in to see Mr. Hunter the medical men had given the case up as hopeless, and then the family tried Christian Science. He said:

"They called in six or seven healers before sending for me. They had come to had done everything it could for him without avail. Mr. Hunter understood fully what was being done and took an interest in the science. He was quite fully what was being done and took an interest in the science. He was quite willing to undergo its treatment, which was entirely spiritual. Doctor Clarke was called in out of deference to the wishes of Mr. Hunter's friends, who thought a medical man ought to see him. I also thought it best, in view of the wishes of his friends."

Wase claims that he cured Mr. Hunter by spiritual treatment, of Bright's disease, liver disease, appendicitis and other complaints, as well as three paralytic strokes.

Doctor Clarke stated that he was first called in to see Mr. Hunter ten or twelve years ago. Looking back now, he could see that at that time the cerebral trouble was beginning. Mr. Hunter got better and did not see him again until five months ago, when he was asked by Mrs. Hunter to take charge of the case.

"I found him," said Doctor Clarke, "as one does find a man with a damaged brain. What he had done in the interval of years is no concern of mine. I am not responsible for any of the things they say he did. The first time I saw him I explained to Mrs. Hunter that I did not think anything homeopathic or otherwise could cure him.

"It is quite a common experience for doctors to come in contact with Christian Scientists. They go off and consult failth healers and then come back to their doctor. The doctor cannot prevent them consulting a 'faith healer,' for there is no property in a patient."

A JAPANESE DRUG STORE.

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na.

TOKIO, JAPAN.

Pe-ru-na is Vsed the World Over.

JAPANESE

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na. This fact is testified to by recent travelers in Japan, who have observed Peruna displayed in Japanese drug stores, in show windows and by means of placards.

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na. This might or might not account for their strenuous, active habits. We are not prepared to say. The Japs are notably a healthy people. They are courageous, supple and capable of great endurance. Their climate is not very productive of catarrh and catarrhal diseases, yet they are in some degree afflicted with this world's scourge.

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na. They have been quick to adopt all American customs. They have adopted our manner of Government, our fashions as to dress, our mode of warfare, our public school system, and they have even adopted our custom of taking Peruna for catarrhal diseases.

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na. The Japs are the Yankees of the Orient. They move quickly. They are positive. Peruna exactly fits in this sort of life. Busy people have no time to bother with catarrh. Colds are irksome and hold them back. They want to get rid of them quickly. Nothing acts so promptly as Peruna. Peruna prevents catarrh by nipping it in the bud.

The Japs Vse Pe-ru-na. Quick action—this is characteristic of Peruna and characteristic of the Japs. It is very natural indeed and inevitable that the Japs should use Peruna. They are up to the times. They adopt all good things. They do not have to be told twice.

War Artists Vse Pe-ru-na. Mr. H. B. Manly, Assistant War Artist to London "Black and White" and "Collier's Weekly" during a the uprising in China, writes: "When a man travels in extreme hot or cold climates he." realizes how valuable a friend he has if he carries a bottle of Peruna. I know of no article in my traveling outfit which I have learned to praise higher."

War Correspondents Vse Pe-ru-na. Mr. F. B. Richards, 609 E street, N. W., Washington, D. C., War Correspondent, writes: "Six years ago I was ordered to Cuba as staff correspondent of the New York Sun. I was in charge of a Sun dispatch boat through the Spanish-American War. The effect of the tropical climate and the nervous strain showed plainly on my return to the States. A brother newspaper man, who had served in the war, induced me to give a faithful trial to Peruna. I did so. To-day I am able to work as hard as at any time in my life."

Civil War Veterans Vse Pe-ru-na. Corporal Joh Finn, veteran soldier of the Civil War, Grat Army man and commander of John A. Rawlin Post, No. 1, Dep't of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, writes: "Peruna warecommended to me by many of my associates I have found it a most agreeable and effectiv tonic, pleasant and soothing. I have suffered from rheumatism and catarrhal afflictions, and have found Peruna most beneficial."

Thousands Vse Pe ru-na. We have in our files thousands of testimonials like the above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of interesting indorsements Dr. Hartman is constantly receiving from grateful people who have used his remedy, Peruna.

Celebrated American Novelist Gives His Views on Present Day Fiction and Critics.

New York, Oct. 1 .- Mr. Henry James, long absent from his native land, returned the other day from Brigland. He is the subject of great interest for many reasons. His life clusion for twenty years in England and on the Continent has kept him personally out of the public eye, which he very much prefers to the amiable habit we have of advertising celebrity.

of the Past.

A lady living in a Western city, whose life was made miserable by her husband's drunkenness, tells how she cured him easily and safely:

"My husband was so addicted to liquor that I had given up all hope that he would ever reform. He spent more money in the saloons than for the support of his wife and baby. I was bordering on desperation when a friend told me how she When questioned about his views of American literature Mr. James would only speak in general. "The mass of writing American literature Mr. James would only speak in general. "The mass of writing is so great." he explained, "and so unguided. Never yet has such a mass of literature been put forth so unwarned, so unprotected, so unguided by any adequate critcism." He spoke rather sadly, rather aghast, of the effects of the demands of the American "publics," which he considers so intermingled, so almost inseparable in their parts, as to be unsusceptible to division into classes of tastes.

We have such a vast number of dissolute readers—omnivorous, gulping readers—those who, fortunately, cannot remember what they read and ought not to care to. They are either ignorant or weary, they cured her son by giving him secretly the great Haines Cure for the Liquor Habit. I sent for the free trial package and gave it to my husband in his coffee without his knowledge. It worked so well that I continued the treatment for a week or two and he was completely cured. He lost all appetite for liquor and could not bear the taste of it. He comes home sober every night and has not touched a drop for three years, and I can't begin to tell you how happy and thankful we all are for what this great remedy has done for us."

But besides an added delicacy from the French, a mellowness absorbed in England, I think we can call Henry James essentially American. He has read our souls a little, maybe much, and he has displayed them sometimes queerly, in worldly environments, without the hackneyed word, with epithets inevitable, in-imitable. Each drawing has been so brilliant as to make another of necessity a tour desprit, "The Bostonians," The Americans," "Daisy Miller," to mention a few, and two women in the beautiful "Wings of the Dove," and innumerable fine line-drawings, etchings, impressionist washes out of many short stories, show that he has not forgotten us either in irony or affection.

"I have had too many American contacts both in my earlier years and abroad to forget my country, to ignore it. For purposes of material these contacts have been sufficient.

"One must not overdo the English and American distinction," he continues, "we are all one literary tradition."

It was in France twenty odd years ago that as a young man Mr. James had the chance to seek how to do these things. With that famous group, Alphonse Daudet, Zola, De Maupassant, the Goncourts, Turgenieff, those who gathered at the house of Gustave Flaubert, he had the inestimable privilege of interchange of discussion, comradeship.

These authors were, as Mr. James remarked, "descendants of a much stronger group. And I wish to say that an author for whom I entertain a great esteem is Balzae."

Balzae, in a sense a "painter of life" in the "Comedie Humaine," is something are for what this great remedy has done for us."

The Haines Cure for the Liquor Habit is guaranteed to be safe and harmless and cures absolutely the worst cases of drunk-enness quickly and for all time. It contains no harmful drugs or poisonous minerals to destroy the delicate tissues of the vital organs and endanger the health and life of the patient. It counteracts and removes from the system all alcoholic poisons and puts an end to all appetite or craving for liquor. Thousands of confirmed and apparently hopeless drunkards have been snatched from ruin by this grand and harmless remedy, secretly given by loving wives, mothers and daughters, and made happy and prosperous men.

daughters, and made heppy care procuss men.

If you have a beloved husband, son, brother or dear friend who is a victim of strong drink, send at once for the free trial package of the Haines Cure and learn how easily, quickly and safely you can cure him. No matter how bad he is or how many years he has been drinking, this will cure him as certain as he takes it.

Balzac, in a sense a "painter of life" in the "Comedie Humaine," is something of a literary ancestor. Henry James has lost the romance which Balzac inherited and gained the sublety of the French analysts which Flaubert's realism in "Madame Boyary" prefigured and which waned in Bourget's feebleness of fibre. All these artists, small and great, have been for our countryman as a fund of experience, His own individuality he had had the courage and strength to preserve. The physical frankness of England and the psychological frankness of the French have done a good deal for Henry James. These influences, to be translated by him, through his temperament, are enriching. If, as Americans, we are not one in culture with foreign peoples, we have still links with the world literature.

If his art is too comprehensive in culture for most of us, yet we may flatten ourselves no other country could have produced him. We find this root in his sense of humor, his avoidance of emotional appear, his very delicacy.

A great many persons prefer the earlie pm works of Henry James. The more "presam ious" work of later periods inspires distrust. There will be many who will contra-dict this-those who prefer his perfected $ dict this-those who prefer his perfected flavor, who delight in the most "Jamesy" things possible, but these are, just now, the connoisseurs.

Whether we admire Mr. James or not, whether outside the scattered ring of his disciples the literary critics throughout erjoys his work, he is not now too sure of himself. A certain self-distrust is perhaps the best thing that our author has taught us.

or himself. A certain self-district is perhaps the best thing that our author has taught us.

This is one of the first notes of that which is growing into a superb public recognition, a superb literary influence. Henors cannot possibly be delayed however little Mr. James desires tuss-personal publicity. We are really glad that our greatest author is going to take us in hand again. He may not have admitted that he intends to, but how can he help it? Because ne has not live? With us, he has seemed to say that we cannot have him. Yet suddenly he has come back.
Our country is so large in area that Mr. James can find unsuspected material for great creations. His intention is to remain here for several months, visiting the South and the Pacific Coast. To touch a good deal of American ground, if only suggestively, is not too much to hope for in his future work.

lantry Throughout the Civil War, Retired in '65, Nervous, Worn-

CAPTAIN FRANK MYERS.

"Like thousands of my comrades, the hardships and exposure of campaigning completely undermined my constitution and planted in my system the seeds of future disease. My throat and lungs gave me considerable anxiety, and shortly after the close of the war developed chronic bronchitis and consumption. In vain I tried all the usual remedies. Nothing did me any good until I commenced on Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. The effect was marvelous. At once I began to pick up, and was soon entirely cured. I heartily recommend your splendid medicine to anyone who is run down, weak or nervous, or who has any disease of throat, or lungs. It cures when all else fails."—Frank Myers, Commander Camp 129, Confederate Veterans, Atlanta, Ga., June 25, 1994.
